

I believe that the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved my time at home by stopping unwanted phone calls. I work with people all day as a trainer. When I get home need my privacy to recharge for the next day. This includes Saturdays. Because my family and friends see me frequently or I call them basically the only phone calls I received prior to the enactment of the Indiana law was from unsolicited phone calls.

The Indiana's law has been very effective. I no longer get calls I do not want. Prior to the law's enactment I would receive about 5 calls a week. Twice I even got one call in the middle of the night. Indiana's law is very important to me because I sometimes work late at night and do not get to bed until very early in the morning. I sometimes need several hours to wind down from teaching and therefore sleep late in the mornings and sometimes until noon. Indiana's law stops the phone from waking me up. Thank you for your attention to this message.
